1987

Mr Goh Chok Tong, the then Prime Minister of Singapore, enjoyed a night tour at the Zoo so much that he mooted the idea of having regular night tours, to be called 'Singapore Safari'.

At around the same time, the Zoo team, led by Dr Ong Swee Law, founding father of Singapore Zoo and Lyn de Alwis, zoo design consultant, was exploring the concept of displaying tropical animals at night, in vast, safari-style habitats. Many tropical animals are nocturnal; showcasing their behaviour in a jungle setting after sunset would bring people closer to wildlife.

Why a Science Centre?

While formal educational institutions make sure we are raising a nation of “science literate people”, Science Centre Singapore takes this to the next level. Science Centre makes science accessible and engaging, creating an environment where Singaporeans are empowered to advance their own learning and, hopefully, are inspired to do something incredible with their futures.
